Today we are pleased to welcome spectators and members to this latest round of the Western Counties West league match at Alexandra Road.

Our opposition today is Truro, who are enjoying a productive season, with some attractive rugby that has earned bonus points from at least four tries on nine occasions. At the time of writing they are scoring an average of 28 points per match. However, in away matches this drops to 19 points with an average of 23 against. At home St Ives has scored the same number of points as have been scored against them. With 167 points for and against, this averages to 21 points each per match. In the previous meeting at Truro in October, St Ives gave away far too many points in the first quarter. After that it was an even affair, but the damage was done and Truro ran out comfortable winners by 39 points to 20.

Truro are fortunate enough to be in a position to run a regular reserve team side, The Titans, with sixteen fixtures so far this season and only two loses. No doubt, this contributes to the current success of the first team. We anticipate a well contested match and hope for some lively and entertaining rugby.

We extend a warm welcome to our match referee, Mr Andrew Reynolds and, whilst it is part and parcel of spectators' viewing to 'assist' the referee in his decision making, the club asks everyone to remember that the officials give up their time freely.
